

Biography – Mark Evans

Mark Evans has more than 35 years of experience in the construction industry and has been CEO of HEB Construction since October 2020. His national role gets him around the regions where HEB operates and enables connection to many of their employees and project teams performing the work in the field.

Mark served on the Auckland Branch Executive of Civil Contractors New Zealand before joining the National Executive in November 2019. He was selected and served as an Industry representative on the Construction Sector Accord Steering Group from 2022 until it was disbanded in 2024 and was appointed to the Infrastructure New Zealand Advisory Council in 2025.

His leadership has helped establish new benchmarks in iwi partnership, collaborative project delivery, and industry engagement. Through HEB's connection with VINCI, Mark also brings access to global expertise, innovation, and best practice that can benefit the New Zealand construction sector.

Mark is particularly interested in applying his networks and experience to all participants across New Zealand's infrastructure system including SME's and suppliers, who CCNZ actively support.
